Planks or Tile

Give your aircraft a good warm home feeling by installing a wood or tile floor. From dark to light colors and even abstract patterns.

Custom layouts

Here are some examples of what types of custom layouts can be done. We have done multiple herringbone patterns. We were also asked to do a layout with chevron style. One of our most recent projects is doing what looks like a teak wood flooring, something you could find in a boat.

Unlike carpet, this product is non porous. This makes it much easier to wipe down. This product is a much better choice in entry, galley and especially the LAV's. Liquids don't soak through, cutting down on the chance of have mold grow.

Durable

Here are some examples of the way carpet can wear and start to warp. Also, you can see how even rolled vinyl flooring can shrink and start to warp. Some people do choose to install actual stone tiles in their aircraft, however, if you drop something on it that might chip or crack. LVT/LVP floors do not do that.

As you can see you can go with an abstract pattern, stone or wood patterns. You can also go with darker or lighter colors.

Solid substrate

One of the most common questions we get when it comes to what flooring type to install in an Aircraft is what does it feel like when it is walked on, how will it affect high heels? Is it going to be stable for them to walk on during flight? This question normally comes up when they are wanting something more than carpet.

Here you can see how changing out the carpet to LVT with a custom design will give this aircraft a totally different appearance. If you look at the carpet you can see that it has stains in it.

Easy removal and installation

Installations is still simple and most of the time can be don by one person.
